PROSPECT HILL,

S.e. corner of 36th st. and Prospect ave. n.w.

The outlook from these lots is superior to any others, commanding, as it does, the full view of the Potomac river for a mile above the Three Sisters, to Fort Washington. Alexandria, Washington city, Virginia hills, Arlington Heights, Analostan Island, Free bridge, the proposed site of the Memorial bridge, Washington monument and miles of intervening country. This locality was reserved by Col. Wm. Doakins (one of the original owners of the land on which Georgetown is now built) as a homestead on account of its healthiness, its magnificent view (and same cannot be obstructed) and the delightful breeze that is almost constant during the summer. This property can be appreciated by a personal observation.

LISTEN TO OUR TALE OF JOY. A little Shirt in our factory grew, Listen to our tale of joy; A little man he bought it new, It fit so nice that he could not do

Too much for us, so to friends he flew
And blew
So true,
Now listen to my tale of joy,
'Twas hard trials before he knew
Where to get a shirt to fit him true;
But now he's happy, no more he'll rue,
For who For who Could do

Could do
Without our Shirts so true?
Now Miller's the man for me and you,
Listen to our tale of joy;
He'll make you Shirts from one to two
Which will fit big men and little too,
So come along and help him through,
And you
Will do
Yourself a favor true.
